72 Shem Ha-Mephorash Angels

The 72 Shem Ha-Mephorash Angels are derived from the Jewish mystical tradition known as Kabbalah. These angels are believed to represent the 72 divine names or aspects of God, each with its own unique function and purpose. The concept originates from the interpretation of a biblical passage in the Book of Exodus (14:19-21), where three consecutive verses contain 72 letters each.

The 72 angels are grouped into eight "choirs" of nine angels each, and their names are derived by combining the 72-letter sequence in the following manner: taking a letter from the first verse, then a letter from the second verse, and finally a letter from the third verse. This three-letter combination forms the basis of the angel's name, with the suffixes "el" or "iah" added for completion.

Each of the Shem Ha-Mephorash Angels is associated with specific attributes, powers, and spheres of influence. Some are considered guardians or protectors, while others are related to healing, wisdom, or spiritual growth. These angels are invoked for guidance, protection, or assistance in various aspects of life.

It is important to note that the belief in these 72 angels is not universally accepted within Judaism or other spiritual traditions. The concept is primarily found within the Kabbalistic tradition and certain Western esoteric practices.
